

WESTERLY

Beginning at 1:30 Friday morning and continuing until 5:30, a dozen private residences were entered and shots were fired by the burglar at a pursuing milkman. The burglar was eventually arrested by Policeman Champlin of the regular force, assisted by Special Officer Thompson, at Bradford, and by eight o'clock, the quick-acting burglar was in a cell at the Westerly police station. Some job for a small town police force.

The burglar gives his name as Russell Williams, age 24, residence 44 Washington street, Westerly, a reamer by occupation and last employed by the Building Iron company in Providence. He declared that he was not a professional burglar, and with the exception of a term in the reformatory at Pottstown, Pa., he never served time for any offense. He says he was released from that institution six years ago, has been married five years and has a wife and two children in Providence.

The first indication the police had that a burglar was at work in the town was a telephone call at 1:30 from the home of Robert Melkie, and Sergeant Ferguson and Policeman Corbin responded. While these officers were investigating a call came from Robert Barr at 2 o'clock, and at 3:30 still another call came in from Albert Spargo. All this time the policemen were busy patrolling the section, trying to get a line on the burglar but without success.

At about 5:30 Arthur G. Wheeler, Jr., of the Hinckley Hill section, came into Dixon square with his milk delivery automobile. He was told of the burglaries and requested to be on the lookout for the burglar, and if he happened to get on to any clue to notify the police. As Mr. Wheeler was about to deliver milk at the Barrington house in High street, he saw a man on the veranda. As Wheeler approached the man jumped from the veranda and ran and Wheeler pursued. They ran between the Barrington house and the residence of William P. Sullivan, in the garden in the rear. Williams throwing away a black bag he carried. The chase continued to a point between the Dwight Rogers and Mrs. John Crandall residences. During the chase, and when Wheeler was about to close in on him, Williams fired two shots at his pursuer but fortunately the bullets missed the mark.

After his arrest, Williams told the police that he saw them several times in automobiles while they were looking him up and knew it was all off with him and that the getting of him was only a matter of a short time. After eluding his pursuers, Williams started for Bradford where Policeman Champlin had been sent. On the highway he was seen to dodge into some bushes by the roadside and then take to the railroad track by Frank Sullivan, who notified the policemen and Special Officer Thompson that the man they were seeking was heading toward Bradford. Williams says that after the automobile had passed him, the one operated by Mr. Sullivan knew he would be nabbed before he passed the station. This belief was strengthened when he walked by a tower house, feeling sure that his coming would be flashed ahead.

As he neared the station he saw two men walk out onto the track and look down in the direction where he was, and concluded they were waiting for him. They did not have to wait long, said Williams. He says he made no effort to elude these two men as he felt sure he would be taken into custody before he could reach Providence as he knew the police of Westerly were on his trail.

Williams says he wanted to get his wife and two children to Pittsford, Pa., and did not have the money to pay the railroad fare, so he came to Westerly to get the money. He says he arrived in Westerly by train between 9 and 10 o'clock Thursday night, and that it was his first visit here. He knew nothing of the layout of the town and selected the section for his work haphazardly. It is rather queer, he said that he worked in such a small section, and was a bit surprised to find that when the milkman discovered him he was in about the same place that he commenced his work.

The houses visited by Williams, and the booty taken from each, as reported to the police, are as follows:

Robert Barr, 37 Summit street, scared off by dog.
Charles Yuse, 18 Chester avenue, $25 and two auto keys.
Albert Spargo, 55 School street, $1.
Charles Rollins, 58 School street, $71.50, ring valued at $5.
James Ray, 15 Cross street, $4.
Lloyd Willard, 55 Cross street, $50 and diamond ring valued at $50.
Alexander Aiken, 55 Cross street, $5.
George Ray, 31 School street, two diamond rings valued at $400 each and a pearl pin.
Thomas Whitehead, 11 Spruce street, ten $20 postal savings bonds, two $100 bonds of same issue. There were in a tin box which Williams broke open and put into the bag.

Williams says he called at other houses, but was scared off by people moving about the house. He added that a man with a "watchful ear," can hear the slightest movement in a house during the stillness of the early morning hours. It was subsequently learned that Williams made attempt to enter the residence of Joseph L. Leshan and Charles J. Butler.

Williams told the police where they could find the black bag containing his break-along and the stolen bonds, and they were found as indicated. The rest of the loot was found on his person. He said $4 of the money belonged to him and the rest to the other people. Williams insisted that he worked alone, gained entrance by removing window screens. All the stolen property has been recovered, and in addition the police have two unclaimed ladies' watches. He indicated where a screw driver he used could be found, near the Westerly Lumber company plant, and it was found there.

Williams persistently denied that he had a revolver, and therefore did not shoot at the milkman. He declared that he was willing to tell all he knew of his ramblings of the night before, and tell the truth, and was ready to make oath that he did not have a revolver. Just before noon, after some grilling, he acknowledged that he did have a revolver and had thrown it away with his flash light in the rear of a building in the Westerly Lumber yard and in the vicinity of a granite cutting shed. Police officers made a search but without success. It was planned to make another search, and if the revolver and flash light is not found, Williams will be taken to the place to locate them.

Police Chief Brown commented with the Providence police department concerning Williams, and learned that he came from Boston a few weeks since and boarded with Benjamin Byron at 404 Washington street. He was without funds, and left his place of abode at 7 o'clock Thursday night, saying that he was going to New York. The Providence police believe Williams has been doing small thieving jobs in that city, and thereby got money enough to pay his way to Westerly and had $4 left.

A colored man, 22, a prisoner at the Providence county jail for robbery and assault, made his escape Thursday while at work on the state farm. This man's name is Richard Stewart on the jail records. Thinking that Williams and Stewart might be the same person, Chief Brown had a telephone talk with jail officials. He was informed that the man held in Westerly was not the escaped convict.

Williams will be arraigned at a special session of the Third district court to be held today (Saturday) and the case carried to the superior court for Washington county. Whatever the bond may be, Williams cannot furnish, and he will be committed to jail until presented to the grand jury.

In the same period eight mortgages were recorded, aggregating $15,100, and two releases of mortgages.

An attempt was made to break and enter the Central theatre, early Friday morning, the would-be intruders evidently bent on getting the cash the theatre contained. An employee had some work that could not be done until after the evening performance. After finishing the work he continued to remain in the theatre during the night. He heard a noise in the rear of the theatre and investigated. He was about to lift the latch of a rear door, when he heard a cutting near the latch from the outside. He then opened the door and saw two men retreating up the bank to the railroad track. The men had split the threshold, probably expecting to pry open the door from the bottom. Failing in this, they began cutting a hole through the door, when detected and hurriedly quit.

The semi-annual convention of the Rhode Island State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, will begin this (Saturday) afternoon and continue through Sunday. The election of officers is booked for Sunday afternoon. John Murphy, formerly of Westerly, secretary-treasurer of the Providence Typographical union, and who was elected to the presidency a year ago, is candidate for reelection. There are several others prominent in the labor movement prepared to run against him for the nomination.

Several contests are expected for the ten vice presidencies. In the state branch each place where there is a Central Labor Union is entitled to representation by a vice president.

Violators of automobile laws, four of them, were before Judge Oliver H. Williams in the Third district court, Friday. John S. Rankin, of Groton, pleaded guilty to exceeding the speed limit when on the Shore road. He paid a fine of $25 and costs. George Farrell, of Cranston, declared his guilt of overspeeding on the Shore road, and came across with $25 and costs. Miss Frances Powers, of Springfield, was charged with operating her automobile in a thickly populated section of Beach street, in excess of the fifteen miles limit, and at a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. Miss Powers, 19, and who was accompanied by her father in court, entered a plea of nolo. She was penalized $35 and costs.

James Fennie, of Kenyon, pleaded guilty of leaving his automobile on the crosswalk in Dixon square, and paid a fine of $5 and costs. In Hope Valley shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, Ward Sherman of Westerly was driving his car up Main street hill when he turned out to pass a horse and buggy, driven by William Larkin, the occupants of the vehicle being Mr. Larkin, his wife and three children. The buggy was demolished, but there it escaped serious injury. The horse, freed, ran down Main street, and turning up Spring street, struck a pile of lumber. One leg was broken and the horse had to be shot.
